FOREWORD

THE MINAMATA CONVENTION ON MERCURY

Mercury is a chemical of global concern owing to its long-range atmospheric transport, its persistence in the environment once anthropogenically introduced, its ability to bioaccumulate in ecosystems and its significant negative effects on human health and the environment.

Threats of mercury to human health and the environment do not observe borders, affecting people around the world and the environment that surrounds us all. There are health concerns, especially in developing countries, resulting from exposure to mercury of vulnerable populations, especially women, children, and, through them, future generations. Arctic ecosystems and indigenous communities are particularly vulnerable, because of the biomagnification of mercury and contamination of traditional foods.

Yet, mercury has continuously been supplied, traded, and used in certain products, processes or activities such as artisanal and small-scale gold mining. By using coal-fired power plants or waste incineration facilities, emissions and releases of mercury into the environment have continued.

To address this chemical of global concern, a legal framework for global action was needed. After years of preparatory work and intensive intergovernmental negotiations that took place under the auspices of the governing body of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), Governments reached agreement on their collective commitment to protect human health and the environment from anthropogenic emissions and releases of mercury and mercury compounds: the Minamata Convention on Mercury was adopted at the Conference of Plenipotentiaries in Kumamoto, Japan on 10 October 2013.

Through the measures under this Convention, we hope to see decreasing levels of mercury emitted to the atmosphere and released to land, water and the oceans. Activities such as artisanal and small-scale gold mining will be supported to move to more sustainable and less environmentally damaging practices, resulting in a decrease in mercury poisoning of miners and their families, as well as decreased levels of mercury in the environment. Phasing-out of mercury-containing products has already begun and now has a legal backbone to increase its momentum; likewise for processes using mercury. Current activities to convert to alternative technologies that do not use mercury have been catalyzed by the negotiations, and the awareness that phase-out dates will be applied. There is every reason to conclude that the goals established in the Convention will be able to be reached.

Controls on the movement of mercury, as well as limitations on the use of mercury from primary mining, will support the above activities through controlling supply and limiting access to mercury. Cooperative actions will assist to address issues of waste mercury, including the sound management of mercury in the short term until final disposal. Specific actions relating to the provision of health services are included, as well as many activities to support research and sharing knowledge. The provision of directed capacity building and technical and financial assistance through this Convention makes the benefits accessible to all. The Convention will drive concerted international action to control mercury with rapidly accruing benefits occurring if there is early ratification that brings into force the Convention and catalyzes even greater commitment to the work ahead.

Implementing the obligations of the Convention, once it enters into force, will also be supported through a mechanism that will include, innovatively, a specific international programme to support capacity-building and technical assistance. In addition, robust provisions for information exchange and public awareness as well as measures to govern compliance have been included in the Convention to assist its implementation.

The Conference of the Plenipotentiaries on the Convention, in its resolution, called upon States and regional economic integration organizations to take, as soon as possible, the domestic measures necessary to enable them to meet their obligations upon ratification and thereafter to ratify, accept, approve or accede to the Convention with a view to its entry into force as soon as possible. UNEP is supporting the efforts towards an early entry into force of the Convention and towards the implementation of its provisions. Together we will be able to address the risks mercury poses to our environment and to the health of humans and that of biodiversity everywhere. By committing to the Minamata Convention on Mercury, Governments will contribute to a transition to a green economy and sustainability of the global environment.

The Minamata Convention on Mercury is currently open for signature at the United Nations Headquarters in New York until 9 October 2014. I invite Governments, if they have not done so, to take the opportunity of this year's Treaty Event to sign, and, where possible, ratify, accept or approve the Convention. Its early entry into force and universal participation are essential to a success of the Convention in effectively achieving its objective.

ACHIM STEINER
UNDER-SECRETARY-GENERAL
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, UNITED NATIONS
ENVIRONMENT PROGRAMME

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

16 MAY 2014

Excellency,

In my capacity as the depositary of more than 560 multilateral treaties, I have the honour to write to you with respect to the organization of the 2014 Treaty Event. This year, the Treaty Event will be held from 23 to 25 September 2014 and from 30 September to 1 October 2014 at the United Nations Headquarters in New York. This will be in conjunction with the general debate of the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly, which opens on 24 September 2014.

The Treaty Event has proven to be an effective means for promoting wider participation of states in the multilateral treaty framework, thereby fostering the rule of law at the international level. Since 2000, annual Treaty Events have attracted a total of 1,878 treaty actions. Last year, 59 states undertook 113 treaty actions during the course of the Treaty Event.

Today many treaties enjoy broad participation, but most fall short of the goal of universal participation. The Treaty Event provides a distinct opportunity for states to fulfil pledges made in national and international forums to sign on to and, particularly, to ratify or accede to multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General. I therefore ask you to join efforts to advance the universal application of the framework of internationally agreed-upon norms and standards. Universal participation and implementation of treaties remains an ambitious yet important goal, requiring the combined efforts of all states.

I wish to extend this invitation to you to make use of the 2014 Treaty Event by signing treaties and by depositing instruments of ratification or accession to those treaties for which I act as the depositary, thus contributing to the goal of universal participation. Treaties covering the areas of human rights, international trade, terrorism, law of the sea, disarmament, environment, privileges and immunities, and the safety of United Nations personnel will be highlighted at this year's Treaty Event. A list of the highlighted treaties is enclosed with this letter. A general list of the treaties deposited with the Secretary-General is available on the website of the Treaty Section of the Office of Legal Affairs (<https://treaties.un.org>).

Should you wish to participate in the 2014 Treaty Event, kindly inform my office by 5 September 2014 of your intention to sign, ratify or accede to any of the treaties of which I am the depositary, so that the necessary arrangements may be made.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Excellency,

I have the honour to refer to the Secretary-General's letter of invitation addressed to Heads of State and Government to participate in this year's Treaty Event which will be held from 23 to 25 September and 30 September to 1 October 2014 at the United Nations Headquarters in New York in conjunction with the general debate of the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly.

The Treaty Event will highlight treaties deposited with the Secretary-General that cover areas of global concern, including human rights, international trade, terrorism, law of the sea, disarmament, the environment, privileges and immunities and the safety of United Nations personnel. The Treaty Event may be used to sign and ratify or accede to any treaty for which the Secretary-General acts as depositary.

It is noted that, consistent with the rules of international law and the practice of the Secretary-General as depositary of multilateral treaties, a Head of State, Head of Government or Minister of Foreign Affairs does not require full powers to execute a treaty action in person. Furthermore, full powers are not required in cases where an instrument conferring general full powers has been issued to a designated person and has been deposited with the Secretary-General in advance.

Where a signature of a treaty deposited with the Secretary-General is to be undertaken by a person other than the Head of State, the Head of Government or the Minister of Foreign Affairs, duly executed full powers are necessary.

The Secretary-General's requirements for a valid instrument of full powers must include the following:

- Title of the treaty;
- Full name and title of the person duly authorized to sign the treaty concerned;
- Date and place of signature; and
- Signature of the Head of State, Head of Government or Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession must also be issued and signed by one of the above three authorities, and should include all declarations and reservations related thereto. Full powers and instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession should be submitted for verification to the Treaty Section well in advance of the intended date of the relevant treaty action. Further information on full powers and instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession can be obtained from the Treaty Handbook. This document and other publications of the Treaty Section are available in the United Nations Treaty Collection on the website at <https://treaties.un.org>.

Advice before 5 September 2014 on your Government's intention to sign, ratify or accede to any of the multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General would assist us in making the necessary arrangements, including appropriate media coverage. The United Nations Treaty Collection website mentioned above provides updated information on the status of all treaties deposited with the Secretary-General. It is requested that appointments be made by contacting the Treaty Section of the Office of Legal Affairs (telephone: (+1-212) 963-5047; fax: (+1-212) 963-3693).

We look forward to your Government's participation in the 2014 Treaty Event.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

OPEN FOR SIGNATURE

The list below is a selection of treaties which are currently open for signature.

Simple signature (signature subject to ratification) is permitted for most multilateral treaties for a specified period of time, though some multilateral treaties remain open for signature indefinitely. By signature, the State has not expressed its consent to be bound by the treaty, which does not occur until the State ratifies, accepts or approves the treaty. Signature does mean that a State is obliged, in good faith, to refrain from acts that would defeat the object and purpose of the treaty (articles 18 of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties of 1969).
